APPENDIX G

Video Teleconference Guidelines (Updated September 20, 2020)

Anytime a meeting is held, whether in person or via teleconference, the AMVETS Parliamentary Procedure and Robert's Rules of Order will be used.

Teleconferencing might be complicated and there will be distractions. Be patient and consider that there might be voice time delays, clarity and background noise from attendees and moderator. When this happens, pause, and ask for clarification.

The following guidelines have been assembled from a review of several online resources as a guide to assist in having an effective meeting.

Attendees

Practice impeccable phone etiquette—there is nothing worse on a call than background noise (typing and side conversations can be heard). Background noise is rude and can kill the mojo of the call.

When you first connect to a teleconference either by video or voice, you will need to mute your line. Un-mute your line when you are asked or if you have a question. When you do speak, identify yourself each time for those who call in and cannot see who is talking.

If you are calling in by phone for a video conference, you need to identify yourself when you are asked. Your information will be changed so those who are on the video conference can identify you.

During the Pledge of Allegiance and Opening Prayer keep your line muted. The Pledge of Allegiance will be conducted by the Provost Marshall and the Opening Prayer conducted by the Chaplain. You can still participate even though you are muted.

Connect 10-15 minutes before the meeting. This will help the meeting start on time and troubleshoot any issues. Do not wait until the last minute!

If you are a new member, contact the Communications Director to help you through the process before the meeting day.

Chair or Moderator

Schedule your meetings with the Communications Director or Executive Director. Time slots might not be available due to conflicts with the Communications Director or Executive Director's time. Do not make an agenda until you have scheduled a time slot.

You will be provided the conference call-in or connect procedures. It will be your responsibility to provide that information to the attendees well in advance to your meeting.

The Communications Director or Executive Director will start the meeting 30 minutes before the schedule meeting time. This will give you time to troubleshoot any issues beforehand and will allow you time to get organized before your attendees start to call in.

There must be an agenda – Not only must there be an agenda, but it needs to be in front of everyone. The agenda keeps the meeting on track and allows all on the call to know the purpose of the call.

The host should have everyone muted except for the one person identified to recite the Pledge of Allegiance, invocation, and roll call. When you are doing roll call, ask the attendee to respond with their name and then mute them. When the attendees announce their name, it will help those who call in know who is in attendance since they cannot see the screen.

Address people by name when you speak to them. Again, because you have no visual cues, if you simply ask a question or make a remark without indicating to whom you are speaking, other participants may have trouble determining who is being addressed.

Direct the questions to a specific person instead of posing them to the audience at large.

Doing so helps prevent confusion and helps ensure that your question is met with an answer rather than just silence as everyone tries to figure out who is going to respond.

Gaining the floor or making a motion can be difficult during a teleconference since the chairman cannot see a raised hand; they must lead a fair and equitable process. If the agenda allows for new business or will require a motion the moderator should lead the process as follows:

- If a motion to approve an agenda item the moderator should direct the request for the motion to a specific attendee or all attendees. Once an attendee moves that the item be approved then the moderator can follow the same process for a second on the motion. If discussion is required, then a time limit is given, and each attendee is asked if they would like the floor with the process proceeds until all have been the floor. If amendments are in order the same process can be followed. The same procedures above can be followed for new business, good of the order etc. if allowed by the agenda.
- The roll call for the vote follows as described previously.

Parliamentary inquiries such as “point of order” necessary and could be minimized early on by polling the attendees in advance regarding agenda items before the meeting and during a roll call for vote.

Conclusion

If more than one person is in-charge of something, then no one is. A conference call is held because a group is trying to accomplish a task. Ensure that each part of that task is owned by someone. Then hold them accountable for the results.
